Overview
As part of LAUNCH, students must complete the Myers-Briggs Type Indicator® (MBTI®) Assessment. Used and discussed throughout the program, students learn about the MBTI®, their individual Type, and how Type affects learning, communication, and interpersonal relationships. This document instructs students on how to complete the online MBTI® as part of their pre-work for LAUNCH.

Background of MBTI®
Katherine Briggs and Isabelle Briggs Myers, a mother-daughter team, began studying Carl Jung’s theory of psychological type. Their goal was to take his theory and create an instrument that would make the study of type available to the general population for the purposes of personal and professional development. The result, after more than 20 years of research and testing, was the MBTI®.

Completing the MBTI®
The MBTI® is an indicator, it is not a test; therefore, please do not search for the best answer. Plan to spend about 30 minutes completing the assessment.

To ensure the results that best reflects your personality type:

- Complete the indicator in a relaxed setting where you are able to concentrate without distractions.
- Do not over think the questions or word pairs, simply answer naturally.
- You may like both words in the pairs of opposites. Please select the word you like best in the context of your ideal world. That is, answer without thinking of what is asked of you at work, school, relationships, etc. Which do you do without thinking? Which sounds easiest to you?
- Answer as you believe you are, not as you wish you were or how others think you should be.

Online Instructions
Any computer with Internet access will allow you to complete the MBTI® online. For the site to function properly, your Internet browser must meet the minimum requirements of Microsoft® Internet Explorer Version 5.5 or Firefox® 2 (or later versions), running on Microsoft® Windows 2000 or Windows XP operating system.

Below, find the step-by-step instructions for completing the MBTI® online.
